

Call^s for Submissions

LAFIN Research

Open call for researchers interested in experimental research to publish methods and findings in a cross-disciplinary/cross-eyed locale.

Research projects are published online, and selectively featured in LAFIN's biennial review. Outside research projects are welcome, but not eligible for financial support through LAFIN at this time.

Send a proposal, cv, and outline to:

Frank Mayfield, Head of Research
research@lafin.org

For more information, archives, etc. lafin.org

research

LAFIN initiates and supports multiple research projects in which experimentation & deviation are pivotal, and researchers for whom the poignancy of fiction translates into the realm of research.

The scientific method is approached as a traditional narrative formula, that can and must be questioned in order to rescue subjectivity from the logical trapping of objectivity.

Lafin calls for researchers to uncover intriguing metaphors, incur cross-pollination, and disseminate new contradictions into the world.

print

In addition to print publishing of various projects, from alternative textbooks, to fictionalized paperbacks, every second year LAFIN publishes a limited edition review, on glossy paper, with perfect binding and with color... (or at least some red). Each edition's thematic focus is cross-disciplinary, open to submissions, and brings all of LAFIN's departments, wings, programs, and founding members into the same conceptual frame.

